TRIED & TESTED - THE ORB

This is a must have product for any salon or spa. Its unusual and pretty design instantly attracts attention and curiosity from clients.

From a therapist's point of view The Orb product is extremely versatile. It allows you more contact time during treatments as you don't have to stop to mix warm water with masks, because it's already heated to a soothing temperature ready for application.

My initial reaction when I first saw The Orb was that the design was elegant and compact. My concern was whether it could contain the amount of product required for a standard full body treatment.

Once the concept had been explained and demonstrated, I appreciated the experience from a client's perspective. A whole new experience of heat sensation can be achieved. Different from just drizzling warm oils, it became clear that it could be used for many more products and treatments than we first imagined.

The design and size of the cups means no product is wasted. Following the treatment, by heating the brush on the base plate of the cup, you can utilise every last drop of product and it still felt like I was applying generous amounts of heated oil.

'The design and size of the cups means no product is wasted.'

The unique heating system of The Orb means that after only 10-15 minutes of charging, once removed from the base, the product stays hot and at a constant temperature for an hour, saving time and hassle by not having to constantly check and adjust a thermostat heater. This quick heating time means we are able to have more than one Orb for one base station, so different products can be heated one after the other.

We have already been heating oils, shea butters and mud masks for use in both face and body treatments. The possibilities for upgrading treatments to incorporate The Orb warm product application are endless and we are already using it for pedicure treatments. I would recommend the brushes they supply, as they feel softer and they pick up more product.

I would definitely recommend a demo, or training session, as you can learn new application techniques with the brushes and experiment with how The Orb can enhance treatment routines.
